

The Pricing Confidence Checklist

Run this before you quote anyone again. Ten checks between you and a number you can say without flinching.

KNOW YOUR NUMBER

- ☐ I know my total monthly cost of operating (product, rent, insurance, software, education, my salary).
- ☐ I know how many client-facing hours I actually book per month — not hours I'm “available.”
- ☐ I have divided one by the other. I know my rate floor.
- ☐ Every listed service currently sits at or above that floor.

SAY YOUR NUMBER

- ☐ My quote is one sentence with no apology clause and no “but.”
- ☐ I state the number and then stop talking.
- ☐ My deposit and cancellation terms are written where clients see them before booking.
- ☐ Existing clients get one cycle of notice for a raise — notice, not a negotiation.

HOLD YOUR NUMBER

- ☐ I have a kind, short, final sentence ready for “can you do it for less?”
- ☐ I track who says yes without blinking — evidence beats fear, and most people blink less than you think.

Chapter VI of Curls & Contemplation — “Mastering the Business of Hairstyling” — builds the full pricing system behind this card, with a guided worksheet in every chapter.
